Couple Charged with Series of Robberies in Burbank

A Burbank couple was charged today with a series of robberies within the span of about an hour earlier this week, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office announced.

Adam Paul Hicks (dob 11/28/92) and Danni Shea Tamburo (dob 6/29/94) both face three felony counts of attempted second-degree robbery and two felony counts of second-degree robbery.

Case GA102754 includes allegations of use of a handgun and victims over the age of 65.

Arrestment for Hicks was continued today and he is now scheduled to appear with Tamburo on Feb. 16 in Department 1 of the Los Angeles County Superior Court, Burbank Branch.

On Jan. 24, both suspects are charged with robbing or attempting to rob a total of five victims, two of them women, ages 71 and 73, prosecutors said. The robberies all allegedly occurred early in the morning within the city of Burbank, prosecutors added.

If convicted as charged, Hicks faces a possible maximum sentence of more than 60 years in state prison and Tamburo faces more than 15 years in prison.

Bail for Hicks was set at $550,000 and $350,000 for Tamburo.

The case remains under investigation by the Burbank Police Department.
