Track Coach Charged with Sexual Battery

A man who coached track athletes at the University of California, Los Angeles, was charged today with sexually assaulting one of his trainees, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office announced.

Conrad Avondale Mainwaring (dob 10/2/51) of Los Angeles faces one felony count of sexual battery by fraud.

Mainwaring pleaded not guilty today and is scheduled to return on July 10 to Department W31 of the Los Angeles County Superior Court, Airport Branch. Case SA100754 was filed for warrant on June 18.

The defendant, who was not employed by UCLA, is charged with sexually assaulting the then 20-year-old victim on June 26, 2016, under the guise of providing physical therapy, prosecutors said.

Bail is set at $100,000. If convicted as charged, Mainwaring faces a possible maximum sentence of four years in state prison.

The case remains under investigation by the Los Angeles Police Department.
