Man Sentenced to Jail for Exposing Himself in Valencia

A 48-year-old man was sentenced today to 364 days in county jail for touching and exposing himself on several occasions in Valencia, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office announced.

Deputy District Attorney Flora Podratz said John Williams (12/11/67) pleaded no contest to four counts of misdemeanor indecent exposure in case 6SC01306.

Williams also was sentenced to three years summary probation and was ordered to take one year of sexual offender counseling and to register as a sex offender for the rest of his life.

The defendant will have to stay away from the victims and at least 100 yards away from the Villa Metro community in which each of the incidents occurred.

Williams exposed and sometimes touched himself at least half a dozen times to eight different victims while staying at a house between March and May, the prosecutor said.

The case was investigated by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department, Santa Clarita Station.
