Man Convicted of Brutal Rape, Assault in El Monte

A 19-year-old man accused of repeatedly raping a clerk at an El Monte convenience store was convicted late Friday afternoon, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office announced.

Deputy District Attorney Cynthia Valenzuela said the jury deliberated for less than two hours before finding Joseph Leo Amaya guilty of two counts of forcible rape, two counts of sexual penetration by foreign object and one count of assault with intent to commit a felony. Jurors also found true a special allegation of aggravated kidnapping.

Amaya is scheduled to be sentenced Sept. 22 at the Los Angeles County Superior Court, Pomona Branch in Department T. The defendant faces a maximum sentence of 125 years to life in state prison.

The prosecutor said on Oct. 19, 2013, the female victim was working at a minimart when Amaya approached her and tried to obtain her phone number. Unsuccessful at retrieving her information, Amaya left the store.

Amaya returned hours later while the victim was getting ready to close the store, the prosecutor said. As the victim attempted to lock the doors, Amaya forced his way in.

Once inside the store, Amaya barricaded the store entrance, dragged the victim by her hair to the back of the store and repeatedly sexually assaulted her, the prosecutor said.

After the assault, the defendant left the minimart and the victim called law enforcement.

With the help of tips from the community, authorities were able to identify Amaya as the assailant and he was arrested a week later. At the trial, surveillance video and audio, as well as DNA evidence linked the defendant to the crime.

The case was investigated by the El Monte Police Department.
