Former Long Beach Hotel Employee Sentenced for Criminal Threats

A 37-year-old man was sentenced today to three years and eight months in state prison for threatening to shoot up a hotel near the Long Beach Airport, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office announced.

Deputy District Attorney Maren Dermody said Rodolfo Montoya of Huntington Beach pleaded no contest earlier this month to two felony counts of criminal threats.

On Aug. 19, 2019, Montoya, who was an employee at a restaurant in the Marriott Hotel, threatened a co-worker and threatened to commit a shooting at the hotel, the prosecutor said.

Case NA112678 was investigated by the Long Beach Police Department.
